NO FEAR OF A TRUST IN DIAMONDS.

Diamond dealers in the fewelry district denied resterday the report that these precious stones had seen advanced in value 20 to 25 per cent since April owing to the operations of a London "trust" It had been stated that three London houses, Jules | Island, fronting the hotel, and the beautiful shaded grounds surrounding the house, will be decorned up the world's output of diamonds, and were restricting the quantity offered to dealers to suit them-

"For four or five years," said James M. Bloomfield, of Bloomfield & Oliver, No. 23 John-st. "there has been a cry, which originates on the other side, that diamonds are geiting scarce and high. It is mainly ewing to the desire of foreign dealers to get rid of their surplus stock. Mr. Oliver sailed for Europe on Saturday to lay in a supply, and we have no fears on Saturday to lay in a supply, and we have no fears that he will not get all he wants. Stones of the average marketable value and of medium pelce are, if anything, cheaper now than they were four years ago. For superine, high-class stones, white or bine-white stones of four or five carasts, there is a brisk demand and they may be somewhat higher because they are scarce. These London houses may try to control the output, but they cannot, first as many diamonds as ever are being found in South Africa. The distinguishing feature of the theft, or one might almost say the amusing feature, was that the same thing was stolen twice within five hours. It occurred, too, at midday, in one of the most frequented districts of the city.

Early Tuesday morning Manager James Theilmann of the Fifth-ave, restaurant, sent to the branch a aver and William sis,, where all of the supplie are kept. Among other orders, the driver was told get a number of cases of champagne. After oading his wagon he entered the restaurant abou 12 o'clock, for the purpose of eating a little luncheon sefore returning uptown. When he returned to the sidewalk, he was dumbfounded to find his horses and wagon gone. A general alarm was given and veritable footrace took place among the employes to the police station. But the neighborhood was searched in vain. No trace of the wagor could be found. About 6 o'clock in the evening however, another driver of Delmonico's happened to pass the lost team in Sixth-ave. Not knowing th strange men who sat upon the box, and suspecting something was wrong, he jumped from his seat, leaving his wagon in charge of a boy, and caught one of the men, the other escaping in the meantime. He drove at once to the restaurant in Fifth-ave., ac companied by his prisoner. It was found that about one-half of the load had been disposed of already one half of the load had been disposed by the thieves.

During the excitement which followed the discovery, and before the remaining wines, cans and other material on the wagon had been removed, the thief saw an opportunity to escape. He used it with good effect. He had the andacity to spring into the wagon from which he had just been taken and drive of up the avenue. A second time the wagon was lost, and nothing could be learned of it despite the vidiant search of the neighboring police and the employes. About 10 o'clock in the evening, however, the wagon search of the neighboring police and the empire About 10 o'clock in the evening however, the waws found in the Boulevard, but the thief again alert enough to evade his would be capt the remaining part of the waron load had been in the meantime, and the robber kept the spoils.

It would appear from an article to be published to-day's issue of "The Boots and Shoes Weekly," he representative of the retail boot and shoe trade that there is a strong probability of a trust being formed in rubber goods. Most of the manufacturers therein mentioned advocate the trust in a guarded way, many of the jobbers openly favor it, many thers declare themselves as not interested, and few others declare themselves as no be opposed to it, the rubber goods men seem to be opposed to it. The general opinion among those quoted appears to be that a trust would furnish the public with rubber goods, and especially rubbers for footwear, of a botter quality than the average of those now made, and that are the control of the expenses of transacting business as now ted by a multiplicity of firms could be done

It was finally decided to leave it to the two railroad companies to decide upon a plan that will be acceptable to both, and then present it to the city authorities for adoption.
